WEST CREEK

reside, building many fine homes which have stood the test of time.

Many of the ships' captains chose the town of West Creek as an ideal place to safe natural harbor for the sailing ships that traveled between the East Coast ports. In fact, quite a few examples of the early settlers' homes still stand in Eagleswood

At Left: Originally serving as a water tower on a farm near Holgate, Long Beach Island, this unique structure now stands on Rt. 9 in West Creek. It was built in the late 1800s, and at one time was crowned by a glass balloon ornament which was replaced by "the chair" in the 1930s.

Prior to the formal legal incorporation of Eagleswood Township in 1874, the small towns of West Creek and Staffordville that make up the township already experience a long and storied history.

In the beginning.

Historic Eagleswood

Natural perfection, more than 300 years in the making.

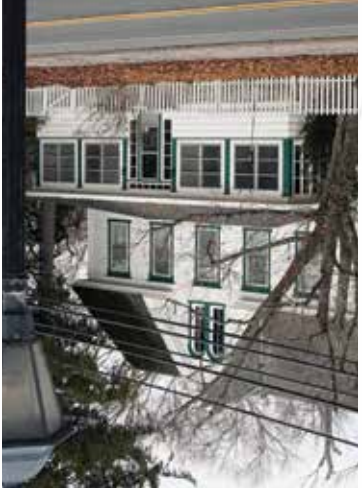

Eagleswood Township today

Today, Eagleswood Township still offers many of the same amenities that attracted the original settlers, and much more. The natural beauty of the salt marshes provide stunning views at both sunrise and sunset all year round. Local wildlife give hunters and fisherman all the action they can handle, and the variations in natural landscape serve as a bird watcher's paradise. For those who appreciate nature as well as a rich and storied history, Eagleswood Township may just be the perfect place in which to set your feet, operate a business or simply visit.

An ideal location, no matter what floats your boat!

In addition to its natural beauty, Eagleswood features local shops, live music venues, golfing and fine dining. And, for those looking for a change of pace, the shores of Long Beach Island are just minutes away. The first-class entertainment offered by Atlantic City's hot spots are also a short drive.

Captain James Cranmer House, on Division St. and Rt. 9, built in 1830 as it appears in December of 2019.
